Natural Lipo-X Makes Woman Go Crazy

Written by Jane Tucker | Tuesday, 14 January 2014 | There is 1 comment

A woman from New York is taking legal action against a health food shop which sold her a weight loss dietary supplement which she says turned her into an angry and violent person.

The 26 year old woman Ms Sainah Theodore was a member of the United States Army Reserves and wanted to get her weight in check and purchased Natural Lipo-X from the Natural Health Food Center in Brooklyn. However, instead of losing weight she said the pill stopped her from sleeping for six days and in an uncontrollable rage she confronted her mother with a knife and ended up in a mental health hospital ward for a whole week.

“confronted her mother with a knife and ended up in a mental health hospital ward”

The case which has been widely reported by the news channel ABC in America highlights the dangers of taking unregistered diet medication which claims to be natural. The woman has no history of mental illness and her doctors said that it was the tablets which had created the angry situations.

Some of the tablets that she had taken were tested and found to contain both sibutramine and phenolphthalein which are banned from sale in the United States and which have considerable side effects. Both of these compounds were not listed on the labelling, advertising or packaging of the product.

Despite attempts by the woman’s lawyer to identify who in fact manufactured the product he has been unsuccessful and therefore the only legal remedy was to sue the company that sold it to her.

This is an important legal development because it is about time that those people who sell these supposedly natural tablets are made responsible for what they sell rather than trying to say they had no idea what was in them. The tablets were likely to have been made in an illegal factory operating in a remote area of China and imported into the United States as natural Chinese medication.

In the legal claim against the health store that sold the tablets, it was stated that the owner Adalgsa Garcia claimed to be a Doctor but no medical degree could be found.

If health store owners are made responsible for what they sell they will be far more discerning about their suppliers and will not just sell anything that comes in a green bottle and which claims to be natural.

The FDA doesnt care about our health. They need us sick and needy. This lady has done this before. I believe shes trying to avoid her legal duty or make an easy buck. These are nice people. I have been there before and many others can say the same, there havent been any concerns prior to this.

I doubt those pills were the ones she originally received from them. No money in the world will save this lady from the Bad Karma shes putting herself through.
